

Meeting Announcement – Monday, June 9, 2008

Speakers: Justin Clift is the Industrial Market Specialist with Hazard Control Technologies in Fayetteville, GA. He graduated from The Ohio State University in 2005. He provides consulting services and conducts training courses on both the Piercing Rod and Powder River Basin Coal Awareness on behalf of HCT. He has first hand experience in extinguishing coal fires across the US as part of HCT's Emergency Response Team. Justin has worked side by side with engineers in the development and design of concentrate control systems for power plant fire protection in silos, dust collectors, and conveyors.

Hazard Control Technologies is a charter member of the NFPA Technical Committee on Water Additives for Fire Control and Vapor Mitigation and is also a charter member of its predecessor task group under Technical Committee on Foam. An HCT officer still serves as Secretary of the committee.

Program: Industrial Applications of Micelle-Encapsulating Agents

Micelle-encapsulating agents were developed to improve manual firefighting operations but have recently gained widespread acceptance in the power generation industry. They are now referenced in NFPA 850, Recommended Practice for Fire Protection for Electric Generating Plants and High Voltage Direct Current Converter Stations. They have also been used to fight fires in outdoor bulk storage at industrial facilities such as the recent scrap rubber fire at a manufacturing facility in Jackson, Georgia, and also at tire manufacturing and storage facilities. Other applications include cleaning and firefighting at facilities prone to oil accumulation such as steel mills.

If you are involved in the protection of any of these industries, this information will help you better serve your clients.
